OPINION

PER CURIAM

Pro se Appellant, Anthony Williams, who has three strikes under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, moved to proceed in forma pauperis in the District Court. The District Court denied his motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) and dismissed his complaint for failure to pay the filing fee, approving and adopting the recommendation of a Magistrate Judge, who concluded that Williams did not allege that he was in imminent danger of serious physical injury. Appellant appeals.

The decision of the District Court will be reversed. Williams, who concedes that he has three strikes under the Prison Litigation Reform Act, may not bring a complaint in forma pauperis unless he was, at the time that he filed his complaint, under imminent danger of serious physical injury. See 28 U.S.C. 1915(g) (2004); Abdul-Akbar v. McKelvie, 239 F.3d 307, 313 (3d Cir. 2001) (en banc). His allegations of imminent danger must be construed liberally in his favor. See Gibbs v. Cross, 160 F.3d 962, 966 (3d Cir. 1998). The Magistrate Judge described Williams' allegations of an injury in August to September 2003 (months before he filed his Complaint in November 2003), his November 2003 report to his counselor of fear for his life about his proposed transfer to a mental hospital, and his complaints about cell assignments, mail issues, and actions related to his grievances and the potential transfer. See Report & Recommendation at 5.

In addition to these allegations, at least some of which do not suggest imminent danger of serious physical injury, the Magistrate Judge mentioned but did not explain Williams’ allegations about lack of adequate medical treatment. See id. at 2. However, the allegations that were not fully considered are those allegations that indicate that Williams was in imminent danger of serious physical injury at the time he filed his Complaint.

Williams alleged, in a claim that he continues to press on appeal, a lack of medical treatment over time for a terminal disease and a urinary tract infection and/or a sexually transmitted disease that put him in “serious pain” at the time he filed his Complaint and at present. See Complaint at ¶¶ 10-18. These allegations satisfy the threshold criterion of the imminent danger exception of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). See Brown v. Johnson, 387 F.3d 1344, 1350 (11th Cir. 2004); McAlphin v. Toney, 281 F.3d 709, 710 (8th Cir. 2002).

Therefore, the District Court’s order will be reversed, Williams will be permitted to proceed in forma pauperis in the District Court, and this matter will be remanded for further proceedings. See Gibbs, 160 F.3d at 965, 967. See also Gibbs v. Roman, 116 F.3d 83, 86-7 (3d Cir. 1997), overruled on other grounds by Abdul-Akbar v. McKelvie, 239 F.3d 307, 311 (3d Cir. 2001) (en banc).
