OPINION OF THE COURT

NYGAARD, Circuit Judge.

Because our opinion is wholly without precedential value, and because the parties and the District Court are familiar with its operative facts, we offer only an abbreviated recitation to explain why we will affirm the decision of the District Court.

Kenneth Bricker, along with Ellen Bricker, Pamela J. Meier, Joseph Meier, Adeline J. Huffman, Richard F. Monning, and Linda Monning were investors duped into a scheme in which debtor and defendant Thomas Martin was allegedly an operative. The investors were led to believe that their investment provided capital to a venture that purchased used railroad equipment and resold it to other railroads. When the scheme collapsed, exposing the sham, the investors sued Mr. Martin in state court on a number of claims including, inter alia, fraud and securities charges. Shortly after, Mr. Martin filed bankruptcy. The investors filed a complaint to determine dischargeability of their fraud and unregistered securities claims.

The court discharged the fraud claims, but abstained from adjudicating the claim focusing on the sale of unregistered securities. The investors appealed, claiming that the Bankruptcy Court erred by discharging the fraud claims and erred by sua sponte granting relief from stay regarding the unregistered security claim. Alternately, the investors claimed that the District Court erred by affirming the Bankruptcy Court's abstention from adjudicating the unregistered securities claim. All of the investors' arguments lack merit.

First, we do not agree with the investors that the Bankruptcy Court exceeded its authority when it acted sua sponte with regard to the unregistered securities claim. The District Court upheld the Bankruptcy Court's abstention on this claim. The Bankruptcy Court may permissively abstain sua sponte. See Gober v. Terra + Corp., 100 F.3d 1195, 1207 n.10 (5th Cir. 1996). Moreover, we do not have jurisdiction to examine the District Court's review of the Bankruptcy Court's abstention. 28 USCA 1334(d).[1]

[1]"Any decision to abstain or not to abstain made under subsection (c) (other than a decision not to abstain in a proceeding described in subsection (c)(2)) is not reviewable by appeal or otherwise by the court of appeals under section 158(d), 1291, or 1292 of this title or by the Supreme Court of the United States under section 1254 of this title. Subsection (c) and this subsection shall not be construed to limit the applicability of the stay provided for by section 362 of title 11, United States Code, as such section applies to an action affecting the property of the estate in bankruptcy." 28 U.S.C.A. § 1334(d).

Additionally, we do not find any merit in the investors' argument that the District Court erred by affirming the Bankruptcy Court's discharge of the fraud claims. We agree with the District Court that the Bankruptcy Court did not make a factual or legal error in finding that the investors failed to meet their burden of proving that Mr. Martin knowingly made false representations.
