OPINION

PER CURIAM

Pro se petitioner, Akilah Shabazz, seeks a writ of mandamus directing the United States District Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania to impose a sentence in United States v. Shabazz, D.C. Criminal No. 3-12-cr-00064-001, in which he was found guilty of aggravated identity theft and related offenses on November 7, 2012, and to rule on his motion for release pending appeal, which was filed on January 28, 2013. By order entered May 3, 2013, the District Court scheduled sentencing for Shabazz on May 21, 2013. Thus, Shabazz will obtain the remedy he seeks concerning sentencing. We are confident that the District Court will rule on his motion for release pending appeal in due course. Accordingly, we will deny the petition.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Even if sentencing were not scheduled, we would still deny the mandamus petition. Mandamus is a “drastic remedy” available in extraordinary circumstances only. In re: Diet Drugs Prods. Liab. Litig., 418 F.3d 372, 378 (3d Cir. 2005). Mandamus may be warranted when a district court’s delay in handling a case “is tantamount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction.” Madden, 102 F.3d at 79. However, the delay complained of by Shabazz is not tantamount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction. Shabazz was found guilty on November 7, 2012. The presentence investigation report was filed on January 30, 2013. On January 28, 2013, Shabazz filed a motion for release pending appeal and on February 20, 2013, he filed objections to the presentence report. Because only two months have passed since Shabazz filed his objections to the presentence report and three months since the filing of his motion for release pending appeal, the delay “does not yet rise to the level of a denial of due process.” Madden, 102 F.3d at 79 (denying a mandamus petition where the district court had not ruled on petitioner’s motion in four months). See also United States v. Campisi, 583 F.2d 692 (3d Cir. 1978) (five month delay between guilty plea and sentence was not “unreasonable” within the meaning of Fed.R.Crim.P. 32(a)).
