OPINION*

PER CURIAM

Tony Granado is serving a 30-year sentence, imposed after he was convicted of various federal drug crimes. In August 2016, Granado filed a motion under 18 U.S.C.

* This disposition is not an opinion of the full Court and pursuant to I.O.P. 5.7 does not constitute binding precedent.

§ 3582(c)(2) to reduce his sentence based on Amendment 782 to the Guidelines (made retroactive by Amendment 788), which lightened penalties for many drug crimes by altering offense levels on the U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1 Drug Quantity Table. In particular, the amendment raised the amount of cocaine necessary to qualify for a base offense level of 38 from 150 kilograms to 450 kilograms. See U.S.S.G. § 1B1.10(d) & Supp. to App. C, amends. 782, 788 (2014). Amendment 782 thus did not lower the offense level for defendants, like Granado, found responsible for 450-plus kilograms of cocaine. See, e.g., United States v. Brown, 836 F.3d 827 (7th Cir. 2016).¹ Accordingly, the District Court denied relief, determining that its prior drug-quantity finding rendered Granado's base offense level of 38 unaffected by Amendment 782. Granado timely appealed.² We agree with the District Court's assessment, and will summarily affirm because the appeal presents no substantial question. See 3d Cir. L.A.R. 27.4; I.O.P. 10.6.

² Granado's motion for a certificate of appealability is denied as unnecessary. See United States v. Taylor, 627 F.3d 674, 676 (7th Cir. 2010). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291. The District Court's interpretation of the Guidelines is reviewed de novo; denial of relief under § 3582(c)(2) is otherwise reviewed for abuse of discretion. United States v. Mateo, 560 F.3d 152, 154 (3d Cir. 2009).
